DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (II known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The main section of Beall-Air is a two story stuccoed brick structure with stone foundation. It is of classical-revival style with an Ionic first floor portico to the southern facing front. The portico has four columns, two pilasters, and a brick foundation. The frontispiece consists of a large double-leafed door with a simple consol at either side, side lights and an over light. The lights are diamond shaped and are located within wooden mullions. The five windows are symmetrically placed around the portico and have 6/6 panes. The central second story window also has side lights which are 2/2 with diamond shaped mullions on the inside of the glass. The corners of the house are projected from the rest of the facade to emulate pilasters. They extend above the windows, horizontally across the front, just below the cornice.

The eastern and western ends are similar to each other; both show the "shadow" of a porch; both have double hung windows; both have a centered chimney in their stepped-gabled ends; and both have outside doors. A first floor window to the west still has the original 9/9 panes, but all others have been replaced with casements.

To the north of the house proper is a small $2\frac{1}{2}$ story structure. It is also stuccoed and has a gabled roof with two dormers toward the south. This section, which is the earlier one, is connected to the classical-revival building by a two story link and one story vestibules to the east and west. It has an "L" on its northwestern corner. This "L" has stepped-gables on its north-south ends.

The windows in this older section are of late 18th century detail with heavy pinned frames.

The stuccoed cornice is of concave moulding to the bottom and convex details to the top.

NATIONA!

The dates of these separate constructions are unknown, but it is reasonable to believe that the rear and older portion was built over 177 years ago by Thomas Beall. The newer section, along with its portico, was added around 1820 by Lewis William Washington.

Soon after Brown's attack on Harpers Ferry, he sent a detachment for Washington. The Colonel, several of his slaves, and his prized trophies were taken to the famed engine house. Lewis William Washington was among those held as hostage at "Brown's Fort," and after the stronghold was broken, was the one to identify John Brown to the marines.

on the relics and slaves at Beall-Air.

When Lieutenant Green entered the engine house, he intended to thrust a sabor into the chest of the insane slave liberator. He tried, but the blade evidently struck something hard under Brown's blouse and would not penetrate the flesh. It is believed that the obstruction was the belt buckle supporting Washington's stolen sword.

The small $2\frac{1}{2}$ story section to the north was used as living quarters by the Beall family until the addition (now the main section) was built by Lewis William Washington in c. 1820.
